Autobiography	My name is Wu Zhen-Ting. I was born in Beiyang Town, Yunlin County, at Fuyou Hospital (which has since closed). I am 182 cm tall and weigh 80 kg. I occasionally drink and smoke, but I am not addicted to smoking. I attended Jianguo Junior High School in Yunlin County. In my second year, since I struggled to keep up with my classmates academically and was more uncontrollable compared to peers of the same age, I went to the psychiatric department at Chiayi Chang Gung Memorial Hospital for an IQ test. Others suspected I might have Asperger' s syndrome, but it turned out to be ADHD (Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder). I was prescribed medication but did not take it regularly. My symptoms have not improved to this day. What surprised people the most was that my IQ at the time was only 60, even lower than Forrest Gump' s (75). During junior high school, our school held an annual inter-class English singing competition, where the first-place winners would represent the school at the county-level competition. Our class won first place with the song Love Me Like You Do, but unfortunately, we did not perform well in the county competition and ended up in sixth place.

After graduating from junior high, my family believed that staying in the countryside wouldn't offer me a good future, so we moved to Taichung. I attended the Data Processing Department at Hsin-Min High School, a private school. During my time there, I served as a hygiene inspector, but aside from that, I had no significant achievements. My academic performance wasn't great, so I decided to enlist in the military after graduation.

During my military physical examination, I took another IQ test, and this time, my IQ was measured at 116.

I chose to serve in the Military Police. Unlike other branches of the military, which typically undergo basic training at Chenggongling before being assigned to specialized training in different units, Military Police undergo both basic and specialized training at the Military Police Training Center in Wugu District, New Taipei City.

Life at the training center was tough and exhausting. Many of our training exercises, including shooting practice, required us to hike 2 kilometers uphill.

Though tiring, the experience was fulfilling and enjoyable. Being away from home taught me many things, helped me become more independent, and improved my interpersonal skills.

After training, I was assigned to the 228th Artillery Battalion of the Military Police, stationed at Meizhuang Camp near Shilin Night Market. The camp also housed the Minister of National Defense's residence. Life after assignment was no longer as fulfilling as training. We had to balance busy duties with ongoing training and physical fitness while dealing with strict superiors, a hierarchical system among soldiers, and frequent inspections from officers. It was a high-pressure environment.

Later, after receiving my third COVID-19 vaccine dose, I experienced severe side effects that led to hospitalization. My physical fitness declined, and I couldn't keep up with my peers, which made me a target for verbal abuse and pressure from senior soldiers. This ultimately led to me developing depression, and I was discharged early.

After leaving the military, I started looking for part-time jobs and used my veteran's educational benefits to enroll in the Computer Science and Information Engineering program at National Chin-Yi University of Technology.
